For GPs who have completed Badger VTS training within the last 12 months you are not required to undertake an induction session and a buddy session is optional.

For GPs new to Badger you are required to attend an induction which lasts approximately three hours and includes:

- An overview of Badger organisation, including policies and procedures and a clinical assessment
- An introduction and skills assessment on the Adastra computer system

After the induction you have a buddy session which is a supervised session with one of our GP trainers. This will last 4 hours and will be paid at the appropriate rate once you start working independently for Badger.

At the end of this process a user ID and password for Adastra and Rotamaster (our rota scheduling system) will be set up and you will be issued with an induction pack.
